A: The server isn't working for you. Steam's servers are down, but they've been down for the last couple of weeks.

The Ultimate Guide to Windows Password Recovery The Ultimate Guide to Windows Password Recovery The most common reason for account lockout in Windows is a bad password. Enabling or disabling Network Account Authentication may help. Your e-mail address can get stolen and altered. You can't tell much about the person it's attached too, like their username, when it was copied from, or the location of the email server(s) where your email is stored. Another way to protect yourself is to lock down your email server and make sure that only the person you really want to receive it can do so. Disable Auto Answer. In the Accounts category, choose your account type in the left column, and then click the Advanced button in the upper right. Choose the the Auto Answer checkbox and the pop-up box will be automatically cleared. If you don't have Advanced Features installed, there is a way around this. You can use the command prompt to change the group policy to never automatically answer the phone. Click Start then type command prompt in the search box and press enter. Double click cmd in the results. Type the following command to change the Autoconnect policy in the Group Policy Editor: gpupdate /force Type it without the quotes and press enter. Try connecting your cell phone again. If you still cannot get your phone to connect, try disabling your antivirus or firewall software as a last resort. Group Policy can also be used to prevent Automatic Joining. To do this, simply follow the instructions above. Change the password for your user account. To do this, please follow the following steps: Click on Start Click on Control Panel Click on User Accounts Click on your account name Select the "Change password" link in the upper right Enter your current password and click the "Change" button Enter a new password and confirm it If this doesn't work, you can reset the password for your user account by following these instructions Click Start Click on Control Panel Click on User Accounts Click on your account name Select the "Reset
