does "HyperMotion Technology" work? With “HyperMotion Technology,” FUT players will perform in a more fluid way, allowing them to change direction more easily, read the game much faster and approach the ball with greater control. The unique movement system will be at the forefront of gameplay, leaving players with more time and space to control the ball in real-time. Players will also have a greater feeling of control over their shooting, with a more natural, accurate and fluid follow-through. The more a player uses their “HyperMotion” to move in the game, the more of a natural movement rhythm they’ll feel in real-life, making the game more engaging and authentic. Movement of players in FUT has been tweaked to bring greater balance, and to present more realistic ball control with greater accuracy. Moves and tackles have been tweaked to make them more responsive and balanced, helping players to become more useful and effective in the new “HyperMotion” system. New animations have been developed for the strikes of goalkeepers and set-pieces, including corner kicks and goal kicks. The goal kick makes extensive use of the bounce, and goal-kicks have been generated using a dedicated physics engine that allows for more realistic behavior

The identification of the HIV resistance mutations and the drug resistance pattern for the antiretroviral drugs among HIV positive patients attending a tertiary care hospital in Hyderabad, India. The aim of this study was to determine the HIV-1 genotypic resistance profile of HIV-1 positive antiretroviral (ARV) drug naive patients at a tertiary level hospital in South-Western part of India. The study included a total of 348 antiretroviral drug naive HIV-1 positive patients. The HIV-1 RNA quantitation and genotyping of drug resistance mutations was performed by means of amplification and sequence-specific oligonucleotide probes. The HIV-1 drug resistance genotypes were classified as major, minor and primary. The frequency of HIV-1 resistance mutations was highest for the reverse transcriptase inhibitors, i.e., the E138Q mutation (33%) followed by the K103N mutation (25%). The M184V mutation was observed in 21% of patients, V118I mutation in 4% and NNRTI mutations (K101E, V179T, V106M) were observed in 3% of patients. In addition, the Y181C mutation was observed in 2% of the patients and the primary mutations (D67N, K70R and A98G) were not present. More than half of the patients showed multiple drug resistance mutations with at least one protease inhibitor or one NNRTI or two NRTI mutations. The present study revealed the presence of multiple drug resistance mutations in the drug naive patients. The mutations were clustered mainly around NNRTI and protease inhibitor resistance sites. This information will be very useful for designing future treatment options and the introduction of newer drug combinations.
