I love that CC allows me to buy an app, open it in the native apps version of Windows and Windows Phone, then open it in OS X version of Photoshop CC with no apparent issues! I've been wanting this functionality for years, so I'm glad they finally added it! Thank you! Awesome update! It's lightning fast, synaptic. Makes much much faster and quicker to do my work. I just had to compare a.tiff file on my iPad and perform a resize and save to achieve the same results as I've been able to do using the desktop app in earlier versions. Wow! I haven't used Adobe apps for years. I had no idea how much I had missed it. How much easier it is to make changes, especially with the smart-preview, the easier it is to make the changes I want. Thank you for taking a chance and making it as easy as possible to change things. THANK YOU!!!!!! The process of lightroom importing can be frustrating. The reasons for import unzipping is described very well there. All the small slip ups in the lightroom import process matter. There are so many out there, which makes your job harder when selecting images to import. But I will tell you what can make the import process much easier. Downside of this is, the you will lose the bulk options in lightroom as they are not saved. If you have your own workflow for complex or sorted images you should transfer this to a LR workflow. Pricing wise LR5 is most definitely a value edition of a size that can easily compete with commercial products. I need help here, as I cannot figure out what the huge gain in speed exactly is in this release. I have an experienced user who is running on non-coinbase Macs, a lot of D800's under the hood and also more than 2k images a day, with or without the latest LR version. She imports no more then 50 images or so a day. And she does it very well. And she can't remember any major speed increase over LR4.3. And it is a plug and play on windows earlier than OS X Lion. It is a pretty good product. But one that should be priced a bit lower.

With the new Program Plugin Architecture, new classes in the new program can be added to the main application. These classes can interface with the rest of the application to perform much needed tasks like download/upload, rendering operations, etc. The classes are bundles of JavaScript Object Oriented (OOP) code. They receive data from the main application in various forms, and then can use this data to perform the desired task. The class then returns the desired results to the main program. With the addition of Program Plugin Architecture, Photoshop Architecture is the external interface between the main Photoshop application and its plugins. It functions as a bridge between plugin and host application and allows interaction between the main Photoshop application and the plugin. It lets the plugin access and use the classes within the main application. In Photoshop Architecture, the main program communicates with the plugin through JavaScript Object Notation (JSON) messages. This enables the application to communicate with the plugin using various file formats that can be used when transferring data, like portable network graphics (PNG), binary formats, etc. This can be used with any kind of media. The JSON messages are passed between the main application and the plugin through the data and metadata store. These message instances can be created in the main application using JavaScript objects. The plugin can then respond with a specific message action to tell the main program what to do.
