Although OS X versions of Photoshop work quite well on iPads, it is not possible to use the iPad app with the iOS version of Photoshop. Another option for tablets is Lightroom Mobile, a photo management and editing app that works on iPads, iPhones and Android devices. Lightroom mobile is compatible with Photoshop via the iCloud library, allowing access to selected images on the fly. Lightroom update 2.6 is out and there are some new features in it. New features include - You can preview the settings of selected individual photos. You can apply Instant fixes to match or repair any scratches. You can access, refine, and modify a number of camera profiles. You can add keywords to photos and groups, and search for specific parts or specific keyword combinations in large sets of images. The workaround to, in fact, all of the above, is that Lightroom update 2.6 is not compatible with update 2.5. You have to upgrade one or the other software.

There are also similar options available with Adobe Photoshop Elements application. As you know, Adobe Photoshop Elements is another photo editing app that provides similar features as the full Photoshop. However, unlike Photoshop, Elements is available for Apple devices. You can upload images to the cloud or use it on any iPad, iPhone or iPod.
